Mrs. Dorothy Forsythe Dale Wins News Letter Contest

THE WINNER of the NEWS LETTER contest entitled "What Middlebury College Means to Me" is Mrs. Dorothy Forsythe Dale, '43. Mrs. Dale accumulated 918 points for first place while Charles N. Du Bois, '34, placed second in the contest with 684 points. Mrs. Amy Niles Glazier, '33, of Buffalo, N. Y. scored 348 points to win third place honors.

Mrs. Dale received her masters degree from Mount Holyoke College and taught in Rhinebeck, N. Y. prior to her marriage in 1945. She is the mother of two small children, Susan Ruth, four years, and Stephen Richard, one year. Mrs. Dale recently moved to Sanford Ave., Clinton, N. Y. Her husband is manager of the Dun and Bradstreet office in Utica, N. Y.

Mr. Du Bois is an Assistant Professor of English at the University of Massachusetts. Following his graduation from Middlebury in 1934 he studied as a Dutton Fellow at Kings College, London, England. Mr. Du Bois is the holder of a Middlebury master of arts degree and has done graduate study at both the Bread Loaf School of English and Columbia University. During World War II he served as a Lieutenant Commander of Naval Intelligence. He is the father of four daughters, Charlotte, Jacqueline, Valerie, and Lorraine.

Mrs. Dale's winning letter follows:

Middlebury College is a memory. It is a memory of Chipman Hill with snow sparkling at night below black twisted trees, the moon rising round and orange over black mountains, white mist creeping along Otter Creek valley on a cold morning. It is sunrises, sunsets, chapel bells, the rocky peak of Killington buried in snow. Middlebury is a truckload of skiers laughing and shouting as they bump along to Breadloaf; it is spring sugaring-off. Middlebury is a memory of youth free and happy in a beautiful world of its own.

Middlebury College is experience in living an idealist's life—a life philosophers dream of but never realize. Everyone eats plenty of the same good food, lives in the same type of room, wears a wool shirt or a pair of loafers, and likes people for what they are rather than for what they have. Middlebury is a democracy where justice is decided by the students, where race, creed, and ancestry are insignificant, and where lasting friendships form in kindred minds. It is a Christian society infused with New England integrity and morality—a white chapel spire and the strength of the hills to lift the spirit. It is perhaps unlike real life, yet furnishing a hope for real life. Even concentration camps and interplanetary collisions cannot reduce to utter cynicism one who has seen sunsets from Chipman Hill.

Middlebury College is an education, not purely a study of facts and figures and the words of dead men, but an education in living. It is a guide to the appreciation and use of the good things in life. Vermont air, a pair of skis, and a mountain stretch the lungs and work the muscles, a good slice of the Appalachian Trail teaches love of beauty and simple pleasures, two teams on a hockey field produce good sports who know how to work together. Middlebury opens the door to culture—music, art, literature—things which, when once tasted, become not luxuries but necessities. It introduces the mind to the hard work and joy of thinking—to the love of ideas, to a delight in new discoveries, and to the satisfaction which comes from creating. It teaches the mind to think logically, view all sides of a question, react to a stimulus, and discuss without the heat of anger. One learns to appreciate the logic and precision of the scientist, the intuition and imagination of the poet. Living at Middlebury is also a training in human relations. The friendly campus "Hi," hikes, parties, discussions, the chance to work with boys and girls together, the job of running a ski meet or planning a dance cultivate a self-confidence which makes one feel at home in the world. The fellowship of a chapel service with its affirmation of spiritual values is a guidepost to still another awareness. In every phase of living a Middlebury College education leads one to the storehouse and gives him the key.

Middlebury College is a responsibility. It is not a dead portion of some lost youth remembered wistfully and nostalgically. Each graduate has carried it away with him. It is as much a part of him as nursery rhymes and πR^2, as Abraham Lincoln and Christmas trees. It is a gift accepted without the paying of a good full price. One who has seen its beauty can never be satisfied with ugliness or mediocrity. One who has studied its lessons knows only how much there is to know and how much there is to do. It is a privilege with its duty. Middlebury College is to me a whole life of being a graduate of Middlebury College.

Chatting after the Barbecue meal is a '45 group

Many Alumni Attend Commencement Weekend

One of the largest crowds in the College's history thronged campus, town, and outlying areas during Commencement weekend, June 10–12. Hepburn Hall, the Bread Loaf campus buildings, and other buildings were thrown open to accommodate the stream of parents, returning alumni, and guests, and the housing was handled smoothly under the direction of Miss Barbara A. Wells, Alumnae Secretary, and Mrs. Gertrude B. Craig, Superintendent of Dormitories.

Fraternity houses also welcomed their share of the weekend visitors. Delta Upsilon fraternity turned over the entire house to D.U. members of the class of 1925 and their families. The open house greeting was extended to all D.U.'s but particularly to the '25 group.

The traditional Class Day ceremonies, Alumni Breakfast, President's Reception, Twilight Musicale, Cane Ceremony and other alumni gatherings filled the three day calendar. An added feature was the showing to a large audience of the new color sound film, "Middlebury College," in Mead Chapel on Sunday evening.

The annual Reunion Barbecue in the spacious Memorial Field House was attended by more than 1700, and after most of the diners were comfortably seated a few showers came. More than 120 cooks, helpers, and waitresses under the direction of Robert A. Summers, College Food Service Director, served the traditional meal, rapidly and efficiently. Three trucks brought the hot food from five college kitchens to a half dozen cafeteria lines in the Field House. Among the food consumed was 900 lbs. of ham, 225 apple pies, 300 dozen biscuits, 100 gallons of tomato juice, 90 gallons of coffee, 375 lbs. of lima beans, and 15 gallons of pickles.

Judge Thomas H. Noonan, '91, of Buffalo, N. Y. arrived early enough to inscribe his bold signature on the first line of the register in Starr Library headquarters. Middlebury's oldest living graduate, Dr. Carroll B. Ross, '82, of West Rutland, Vt., also registered in a strong hand before going over to the Barbecue where he took his customary bow.

Conspicuous among the returning graduates were the "Milwaukee Gang" that made Milwaukee famous in Middlebury in the twenties. It was the 25th anniversary for most of them, and others of their era came along from wherever they are now located to relive the old days when Middlebury tied Harvard. On the list were Marshall M. Klevenow, '25, and Mrs. Klevenow, Aloys P. Papke, '25, and Alberta Papke, '26, Stone C. and Mrs. Hallquist, '25, and Ervin F. Gollnick, '25, all now of Milwaukee. Frederick E. Ehlert, '27, Harry J. Frank, '26, Kenneth W. Anderson, '25, and their wives completed the Milwaukee party.

The familiar signatures of Middlebury's only living ex-President, Dr. John M. Thomas, '90, and Dean Emeritus of Women, Mrs. Eleanor Ross Thomas, '95, appeared together in the register as did the name of Miss Jennie H. Bristol, Registrar Emeritus, whose name has appeared on the transcripts of thousands of Middlebury graduates.

Among addresses listed from farther afield are: A. E. Batchelder, '00, Granite Falls, Minnesota; Margaret Peck, '25, Alumni Awards for meritorious service to their Alma Mater went to Dr. Stewart Ross, '20, and Hugh O. Thayer, '12.

Austin, Texas; Eleanor L. Jacques, '39, and Arthur F. Jacques, '40, St. Louis, Mo.; Donald T. Spore, '40, Cocoa, Fla.; and Donald S. Cann, '25, and Ruth Moore Cann, '29, Daytona Beach, Florida.

Percy L. Roberts, '05, and Harry S. Fisher, '05, checked in on Wednesday, June 7th, in order to get a head start on the weekend.

A feature of the Barbecue was the presentation of beautiful hammered pewter Alumni Awards to Dr. Stewart Ross, '20, and Hugh O. Thayer, '12, of Swarthmore, Pa., for meritorious service to the College.

William H. Edmunds of Burlington, a trustee and chairman of the 1950 Alumni Fund, presented President Stratton with a huge cardboard check for $16,055.55, signifying that the goal of $15,000 had been surpassed by the generous contributions of some 1900 alumni.

A special feature of this year's Barbecue was the inviting of emeritus members of the faculty as guests of the College. Emeriti present included: Professor Charles A. Adams, Miss Jennie H. Bristol, Professor and Mrs. Frank W. Cady, Professor Lewis J. Hathaway, Professor Clara B. Knapp, Miss Ruth W. Temple, Professor and Mrs. Frank Howard, Dr. Eleanor Ross Thomas, Dr. John M. Thomas, Mrs. Charles Baker Wright and Mrs. Alice Burrage.

The Class of 1895 won the McCullough Reunion Cup with 50% of their living membership registered for Commencement. Mr. Hall Park McCullough presented the cup to Professor Charles A. Adams who had arranged their 55th reunion. Others besides Professor Adams from the class were: Miss Harriette H. Steele, Mrs. Eleanor Ross Thomas, Mr. Earl H. Cushman, and Mrs. George S. Wright.

Midd '25 members arrive for the Barbecue

Newly elected alumni and alumnae officers introduced at the Barbecue were: Mrs. Gunhild Elfstrom Carlson, '27, of Worcester, Mass., President of the Alumnae Association; Judge Elbert T. Gallagher, '23, of Katonah, N. Y., Alumni Trustee; Mr. Donald D. Frederickson, '25, of Madison, New Jersey, National President of the Associated Alumni; Mr. Melvin C. Livingston, '25, of Mechanicville, N. Y., President, Albany district; Dr. Lester Q. Stewart, '26, of Hartford, Conn., President, Connecticut district; Mr. J. Calvin Affleck, '31, of Maywood, New Jersey, President, New York City district. Unable to attend the Barbecue was Mrs. Grace Cheney Greene, '29, Pelham Manor, N. Y., newly elected Alumnae delegate-at-large.

Ten of 19 living members of the Class of 1900 gathered at the Brandon Inn Saturday evening under the leadership of Guy B. Horton of Montpelier and the Rev. O. R. Houghton of Wallingford, Vt. Graduates of '98, '99, '01, and '02 increased the number present to twenty-four. The Class of 1900 gave the famous Centennial Latin Play in 1900.

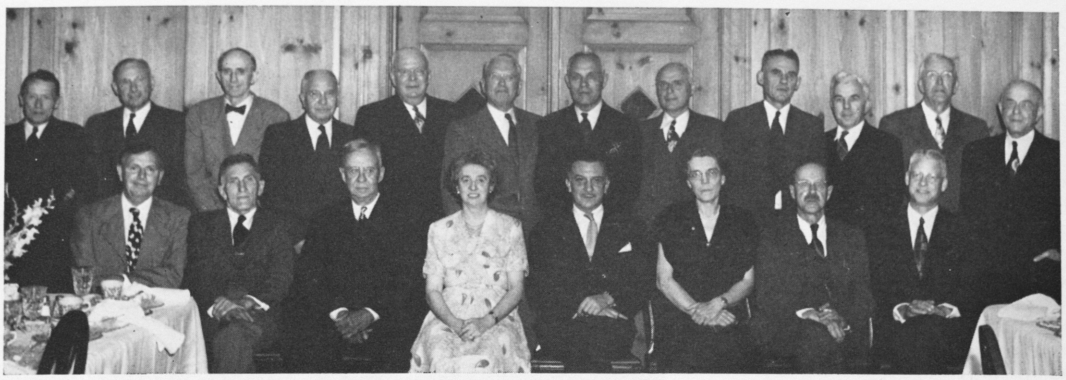
An informal dance for the alumni was held in McCullough Gymnasium on Saturday evening. On Friday evening the College Players presented an encore run of "The Taming of the Shrew," which had run earlier in the spring. McCullough Gymnasium was the scene of the Senior Ball also on Friday evening.

Sunday's Baccalaureate Address was given by Dr. Leon M. Adkins, '19, newly appointed pastor of the University Methodist Church of Syracuse, N. Y. His address was entitled, "And Now to Live!"

President Samuel S. Stratton was forced to absent himself from the Baccalaureate Service, journeying that day to Hanover, N. H. to receive an honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Dartmouth, his alma mater (see page 6).

Dr. Stephen A. Freeman, vice-president of the College, missed Commencement for the first time in many years as he traveled to Burlington to receive an honorary degree of Doctor of Human Letters at the University of Vermont commencement.

Class of '96 and friends enjoy the Reunion Barbecue



Among the honored guests at a dinner given this spring by President and Mrs. Stratton for faculty, trustee and administrative staff members in the service of the College for twenty-five years or more were, left to right: Sitting, Phelps Swett, Perley Davison, Redfield Proctor, Miss Mary Rosevear, President Stratton, Miss Ruth Temple, Duane Robinson and Stephen Freeman. Standing, Douglas Beers, Arthur Brown, Frank Howard, Burt Hazeltine, Edgar Wiley, Raymond White, Allen Cline, Conant Voter, Perley Perkins, Bruno Schmidt, Frank Cady, and Robert Hope.

Professor Cady, Miss Temple To Retire on July First

Miss Ruth W. Temple, Assistant Dean of Women, and Professor of English, Frank W. Cady, became emeriti on July 1st after long service to the College. A native of Rutland, Vt., Miss Temple joined the College staff in 1922 and has been Assistant Dean of Women since 1926. She was graduated from Mount Holyoke College and for a period taught Latin at Middlebury.

Professor Cady, who began his teaching duties at the College in 1909, will continue to teach on a part-time basis next year. He was graduated from Middlebury College in 1899 and also studied at Oxford University. He is the father of three Middlebury graduates, Wallace M., '34, Howard S., '36, and Frances M. Cady Grauman, '41.

Miss Temple and Professor Cady were among a group of staff members with over 25 years of service at Middlebury that was honored at a dinner given this spring by President and Mrs. Samuel S. Stratton. (See photo above.) Among the emeriti present were: Miss Jennie H. Bristol, Miss Clara B. Knapp, Professor Charles A. Adams, '95, and Professor Everett Skillings.

The Honorable Redfield Proctor, a trustee of the College for 31 years, was an honored guest as was Mrs. Alice B. Nelson, whose husband, Allen H. Nelson, '01, was a trustee for 20 years. Other long-time trustees of the College unable to attend the dinner were Hall P. McCullough and Albert H. Wiggin. Also present were Mrs. Charles Baker Wright, Mrs. William S. Burrage, and Mrs. Ernest C. Bryant, widows of former professors whose combined service at Middlebury College totaled 113 years. A huge cake was baked for the occasion (see cover) and cut at the dinner by Charles C. Cutting, '21, a chef in the College dining halls for 25 years. President Samuel S. Stratton gave a brief address on the occasion.

Active 25-year members of the faculty honored at the dinner included: Dr. Stephen A. Freeman, Vice-President of the College; Edgar J. Wiley, Director of Alumni Relations; Robert D. Hope, assistant Treasurer of the Corporation; Professor Douglas [Continued on page 22]

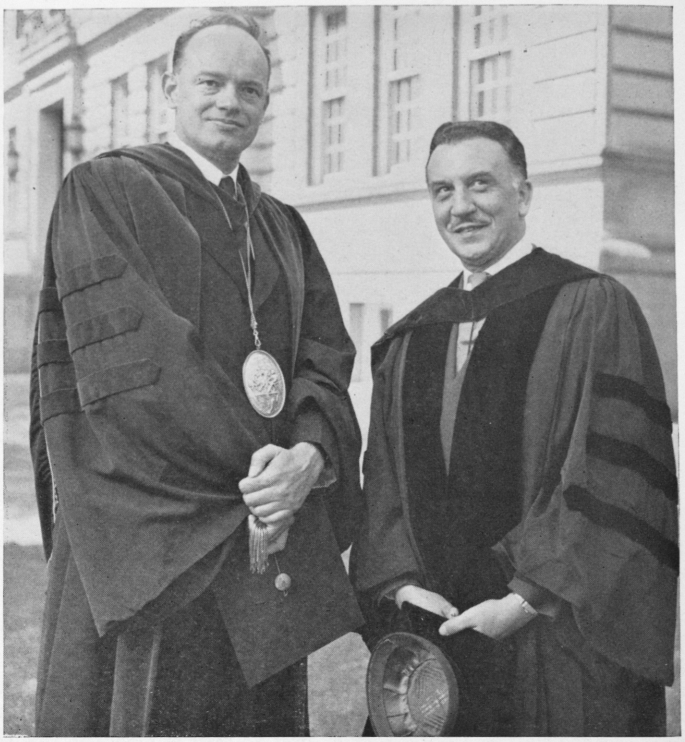
Dartmouth Awards President Stratton Honorary Doctorate

President Samuel S. Stratton was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws by Dartmouth College at Hanover, N. H., on June 11, 1950. Following is a copy of the citation which accompanied Dr. Stratton's honorary Doctorate.

Samuel Sommerville Stratton, Dartmouth B.S. of the Class of 1920 and 10 years later a Harvard Ph.D., your early career represents a heresy, now unhappily rare among economists, whereby you left the fortunes of business to pursue a Ph.D. rather than contrariwise. There are some who might avow that in subsequently becoming a professor, a War Production Board official and then a college president, you were never able to arrest the dread decline which ensued from that first backsliding moment. We here, however, are glad of the course you chose and rejoice with you in the opportunities it has brought. Since 1943 as President of Middlebury College you have put the breadth of your experience at the service of one of the great historic colleges. It is with family pride and neighborly affection that Dartmouth today acknowledges her gratification in the achievement of a son and salutes with admiration the institution he now heads in the year of its 150th anniversary. In token of the esteem whereof you and Middlebury are held by your alma mater, she confers on you the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.



President Stratton with President John Sloan Dickey of Dartmouth, who conferred the honorary Doctorate of Laws upon him at Dartmouth's 181st commencement.

Mr. Harris

Miss Hayden

Two Middlebury College faculty members died this spring, one an instructor emerita of music and the other a young associate professor of chemistry.

Miss Minnie A. Hayden, who established a department for voice training at Middlebury College, was in her 90th year. She was Dean of the Music School, Summer Sessions, from 1913 to 1925. She directed the voice training department from its beginning in 1921 until her retirement in 1933. She died in Pittsford, Vt. and was buried in East Middlebury.

Dr. Robert L. Harris, 33, a member of the faculty since 1946, died of a heart attack on May 9th. A brilliant young scientist, he was completing an experimental investigation of the nature of rust under a grant from the Research Corporation of New York. He held degrees from Syracuse University and Renssalaer Polytechnic Institute. Prior to joining the Middlebury faculty, Dr. Harris was a member of the staff of the Cleveland Research Laboratories of the Standard Oil Co. of Ohio. He was buried in his native Massena, N. Y.

President Announces Three Faculty Leaves; New Department Head

The appointment of J. Stuart Prentice as Professor of Economics and the granting of sabbatical leaves to Professor Reginald L. Cook, '24, and Associate Professor Mary S. Rosevear and a leave of absence to Associate Professor Richard L. Brown were announced recently by President Samuel S. Stratton.

Mr. Prentice, who has been acting head of the Economics Department as an associate professor, became head of that department as of July 1st. He was graduated from Queens University in 1920 and received his M. A. in 1927. Before coming to Middlebury in 1931, Mr. Prentice taught at Hislop College, Nagpur, India and at Queens University, Defiance College, and the University of Chicago.

Professor Cook plans to spend his sabbatical leave studying at the Huntington Library, San Marino, California and to travel through the United States and possibly Europe. He joined the Middlebury faculty in 1929 and is Director of the Bread Loaf School of English. Miss Rosevear will begin her leave in February and hopes to travel in Europe. As an alternative she may visit colleges in the United States, seeking ideas to improve the physical education department here.

GUY B. HORTON, '00

Guy B. Horton, '00, prominent lawyer and insurance expert, has been named Archivist for the State of Vermont by Governor Harold J. Arthur. To him falls the task of preparing a scientific and practical system of records management for his native state. He will represent the Vermont Public Records Commission in its duty of overseeing and assisting records officers throughout the state.

Admitted to the Vermont bar in 1906, Mr. Horton early served his state by devoting eight years to a revision of the Digest of the Vermont Supreme Court Reports. He practiced law in his own and other firms during this time. In 1919 he joined the legal staff of the National Life Insurance Company and for twenty-two years pioneered in insurance settlements and life insurance trusts.

A former member of the Middlebury College faculty, Mr. Horton served as an assistant professor of history at Norwich University during the wartime ASTP program. During his career he has made extensive research in legal aspects of insurance and has written books on his findings. He now resides in South Hero, Vt.

ARTHUR W. PEACH, '09

Arthur W. Peach, '09, head of the English Department at Norwich University, is the new director of the Vermont Historical Society. Dr. Peach resigned his Norwich post last month after 37 years service at the military school.

He has been a leader in literary, historical, and other state affairs for 30 years. He took his M.A. at Norwich, studied at Columbia and was given an honorary Doctor of Letters degree at Middlebury in 1935. His writings include; "The Hill Trails," (poems) "Selections from Thomas Paine," and "The Country Rod and Gun Book," as well as much prose and poetry in leading magazines. He is editor of "At the Sign of the Quill," a literary section of the quarterly "Vermont Life."

WILLIAM B. CRAIG, '37

William B. Craig, '37, has been appointed Dean of Students at Washington State College at Pullman, Wash. At 35 years of age, Mr. Craig will have supervision over some 6000 students. On the staff at Washington State since 1946, he served successively as a counselor, instructor in education, and administrative assistant to the Dean. He became Acting Dean last August when Dean W. W. Blaesser was given a leave of absence. Mr. Craig taught and coached at Middlebury high school, served Middlebury College as assistant director of admissions, and did personnel work at the University of Minnesota. He was a naval officer in the recent war. He is the son of Mrs. Gertrude B. Craig, superintendent of the College dormitories. He is married to Mary Lois Bestor, '37, and they are the parents of three sons.

JOHN C. JOHNSON, '41

Dr. John C. Johnson, '41, is a newly appointed Assistant Professor of Meteorology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. A physics major at Middlebury, Dr. Johnson served as a weather officer in the Army Air Forces, flying reconnaissance missions out of Italy. On his eleventh mission he was forced down in enemy territory and remained a prisoner of the Germans for five months.

He received his S.M. degree in meteorology at MIT in 1946 and his Sc. D. in 1948. As an instructor at MIT for the past three years, Dr. Johnson has been teaching thermodynamics and physical meteorology. Parts of his doctor's thesis were published in the "Journal of Applied Physics" and "Transactions."

CHARLES S. JONES, '15

Charles S. (Casey) Jones, '15, will serve as president of Wings Club for the next year. For thirty years a prominent figure in aviation, Jones won over 40 air races between 1919 and 1926. He was founder and president of Casey Jones School of Aeronautics, Inc. From 1929 to 1932 he was a vice president of the Curtis Wright Corp. He is also president of the Academy of Aeronautics at LaGuardia Airport. As a first lieutenant, Casey Jones flew pursuit planes in the first World War.

EUNICE A. GOODFELLOW, '47

Eunice A. Goodfellow, '47, has been appointed by the American Board of Foreign Missions in Boston to a three year term as teacher of music and English at the Uduvil Girls' School in Ceylon. Miss Goodfellow took her M.A. degree at Claremont College in California this year. The Uduvil Girl's School is the oldest girls' boarding school in the Orient and one of the largest. It is located in the northernmost part of Ceylon on the Peninsula of Jaffna. Miss Goodfellow expects to sail for her new assignment in the fall.

WALVER S. B. TATE, '30

Walter S. B. Tate, '30, has been named director of senior placement at Brown University, Providence, R. I. He also attended Suffolk University in Boston and was graduated from Brown in 1948. Tate will serve as liason between job seeking Brown seniors and potential employers.

REPORTING THE HIGHLIGHTS OF THE COLLEGE YEAR

The academic year 1949–50 was one of the most successful in the 150-year history of Middlebury College, as a record number of 346 freshmen entered, bringing the enrollment figure to a near record 1231. Twenty-six states and nine foreign countries were represented in the student body. . . . Dean of Women Mary S. Williams resigned in late August, and the duties of Dean were performed for the year by a committee which included Mrs. Elizabeth B. Kelly, chairman; Miss Mary S. Rosevear, and Miss Ida V. Gibson. . . . Maid service was somewhat curtailed in the dormitories this year. It was either that or increase dormitory rent. . . . Bill Cunningham, columnist and radio commentator, spoke at the first Alumni Sports Night sponsored by Alumni in Vermont. Dr. Stewart Ross, '20, headed the September affair and freshmen were guests of honor. . . . Miss Florence K. Lockerby, '28, became Director of Admissions for Women in November.

Bruno M. Schmidt, associate professor of geology, broke a leg in August while searching in Bristol for a boulder suitable as a monument for Lang Memorial Field next to the field house. . . . Ralph A. Loveys, '51, was named an end on the All-Small College team in Football Magazine. He's selected again for this year's team. . . . Patricia A. Perkins, '49, Carnival Queen of '49, was cover girl on September 4, 1949 This Week Magazine. . . . McCullough Gymnasium opened its doors in September, redecorated and renovated, exclusively for the use of women. . . . The 1949 Football Panthers won 4, lost 2, tied one. . . . UVM's best team in years was beaten 14 to 6. Members of the 1919 Middlebury team were invited to UVM game, and eight came to greet their coach, Arthur M. Brown. . . . The College Concert Lecture series for the year: "Julius Caesar" by the Margaret Webster company; Richard Dyer Bennet, the minstrel; the Bach Aria Group; Eugene List, "pianist of Potsdam"; and the Vermont State Symphony Orchestra, Allan Carter director and David E. Smith, '50, piano soloist. . . . WMCRS, campus radio station, broadcast from new studios in the Student Union Building and gave play by play accounts of hockey and basketball games from the field house.

"I Fell For the Footlights," an article by William Hazlett Upson on his "Middlebury Parade" experiences, appeared in a December Saturday Evening Post. . . . Walter A. Maurer, '50, led the varsity basketball team to a final win over UVM to offset a mediocre 8–10 season. . . . Robert S. Bennitt, '50, captained the hockey team to an 11–10 season and the state championship. . . . Hockey-Basketball doubleheaders were a novelty at Middlebury during the winter. Because of scheduling difficulties, customers got two games on one ticket. . . .

The Interfraternity Council this year passed a resolution that all campus fraternities with discriminatory charter clauses must remove them by September, 1952 or face expulsion from the IFC. . . . Two scholarships were established in the memory of Charles Baker Wright, former dean and English professor at Middlebury for 35 years. First recipients are Philip A. C. Clarke, '51 and Ethel Jo Overlock, '51. . . . "Walls of Ivy," written by Dorothy Hood, '43, was approved as the College alma mater on a one-year trial period by vote of the student body. . . . Professors Phelps N. Swett, Waldo H. Heinrichs and H. Ward Bedford, spent the year on sabbatical leaves for educational travel and advanced study.

The 19th Annual Carnival was blessed with abundant snow. Both Middlebury men and women ski teams won crowns. Royal pair was Marilyn A. Marvin, '50, Three Rivers, Mich., and Paul G. Kailey, '50, Berlin, N. H. . . . Phi Kappa Tau officially became the ninth campus fraternity with an installation dinner March 16th. Professor Benjamin F. Wissler is faculty advisor. The house is located on Storrs Avenue. . . . "Potted Ivy League" is the name given to a proposed football loop to include Middlebury, Williams, Amherst, Wesleyan, Bowdoin, Union, Tufts, and Trinity. Coach Len Watters of Williams conceived the idea. President Stratton, Coach Arthur M. Brown, and Duke Nelson see merit in the idea. . . . "Two Journeyman Painters," a book released this spring, is the work of Arthur K. D. Healy of the Fine Arts Department and Alfred Frankenstein, art critic of the San Francisco Chronicle. . . . Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra invited the College Choir to sing with the Boston Pops Orchestra and Mrs. Prudence F. Bussey directed the Middlebury group in Symphony Hall, May 9th.

"Freedom in an Age of Science" was discussed at the 8th Annual Conference by ten prominent speakers from the fields of science, education, art, labor relations, and industry. Zechariah Chaffee, Jr., Harvard Law professor, was moderator. George S. Conomikes, '50, and Claire Dufault, '50, were co-chairmen with C. Leonard Hoag of the Political Science department heading the faculty committee. . . . The "cut" system will be replaced by an attendance system effective next fall as the result of a faculty vote of approval. Probation will be more flexible, and academic achievement rather than mere physical presence will be made the object of attendance at classes.

Robert Frost read from his poems in Mead Chapel May 10th under Mortar Board sponsorship. . . . "The Taming of the Shrew" was presented by the College Players before large audiences April 26–29 and again June 9th for commencement visitors. . . . Junior Weekend Queen was Jane A. Walker, '51, of Saco, Me. Diane K. Stoddard, '51, New Rochelle, N. Y. and Ralph A. Loveys, '51, Melrose, Mass. were co-chairmen. Variety Show, Ball, Tug-of-War, Step Singing were features.

C. Irving Meeker, '50, won the New England low hurdles championship at Brunswick, Me. this spring. . . . The Philadelphia Phillies and the Boston Braves broke up Coach Dick Ciccolella's 1949 keystone combination. Paul T. Farrell, '51, signed with the Phillies, while John E "Ace" Mulcahy, '50, signed a Braves contract. . . . John V. Corbisiero, '50, became the first Midd man to sign two professional contracts by joining the Boston Braves system this winter. John formerly played pro football with the Chicago Bears. . . . Lacrosse was played officially this year with Harold P. Parker, sociology instructor, coaching. Lacking depth, the squad dropped six of seven games. Guido V. Tine, '51, was captain. . . . Richard J. Shea, '50, captained the baseball team to the state championship this spring and a 10–5 record.

Middlebury's Town Poor Farm was cleaned, painted and redecorated inside this spring by twenty volunteer student workers under the leadership of William S. Frei, '51, of Glen Rock, N. J. . . . Harold B. Hitchcock, associate professor of Biology, will study the habits of homing pigeons this summer with the aid of a grant from the American Philosophical Society. . . . Amerika Illustrated, the State Department publication distributed in Soviet Russia, devoted a section of its June 1950 issue to the Middlebury College Summer Language Schools.

Robert M. Rauner, '50, Walden, N. Y., winner of the annual Dutton Fellowship award, plans to sail in August for England where he will spend a year of study at the London School of Economics. The Dutton Fellowship was established in 1926 by Redfield Proctor, a Trustee and a former Governor of Vermont. It provides $2500 for a year's graduate study in an English speaking country other than the United States or in France or the Netherlands. . . . Betty Bates, '52, Quincy, Mass., will receive special research training this summer at the Roscoe B. Jackson Memorial Laboratory at Bar Harbor, Maine, a renown center for the investigation of hereditary diseases in animals. She is one of thirty students who were chosen competitively from applicants all over the country. Her outstanding work in science this year won her the selection.

By David L. Thomson, Dean of the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research, McGill University

For the most important section of my audience, this day marks the end of their formal general education. From here they will go out into either the harder school of the world or on to professional and graduate schools. A milestone has been reached. And every graduate today would do well to look back for a moment, to ask himself what were the objectives of the education he has been offered here and how far they have been attained.

College is a springboard, but it is also something in itself, with its own self-contained objective of providing a general education. The college has the dual function of teaching facts and skills while developing intellect and character, and it must achieve a balance between the two processes. Although you ask yourself today how far the college has succeeded in its double task, you will not fully know the answer for many years.

It has been said that an educated man is one who knows when a case is proved. Indeed, there is no clearer mark of the uneducated man than that he refuses to accept what is certainly true while believing in things obviously tainted and partial. However, I find something sterile in this definition of the educated man because, after all, very few things have been finally and conclusively proved. Starting from certain axioms, we can prove that two and two make four, or that the angles of a triangle add up to two right angles. But such statements seem to be no more than enlargements of the axioms from which we started. Many of the things we accept as true, as proved, are so only because we ourselves laid down the conditions that make them so. Thus, a man who knows only when a case is proved, and cannot take a stand until it is proved, is not likely to make much of a mark in the world. A general education should, then, equip us to think as clearly as possible in a world teeming with uncertainties.

Honored by Middlebury College at commencement on June 12 were these recipients of honorary degrees. Left to right, seated—The Rev. James C. McLeod, '26, Chaplain of Northwestern University; Dr. David L. Thomson, Dean of the Faculty of Graduate Studies and Research at McGill University; President Samuel S. Stratton who conferred the degrees; and Admiral Kent Hewitt, retired war-time naval commander in European operations. Standing— Dr. John A. Reynolds, '19, metabolist and cardiologist; Karl S. Twitchell, world-wide explorer and mining engineer; and William Hazlett Upson, short story writer.

Among these uncertainties, none is more significant than our confusion about the words "right" and "wrong." And when we ask ourselves what are the standards of these "right" and "wrong" judgments, we become doubly confused. Here, then, is the problem: What is the basis for a moral code in the North America of 1950? For millions who still rest firmly in and fully accept the teachings of one of the great religions, there is no problem in this question. Yet, I think we must admit that there are millions also for whom the answers supplied by the great churches are not satisfying, not final. It is to these that I address myself.

Many of these people still consider themselves sons of their church. They believe it is a wholesome force in society and they follow its teachings until a difficult decision presents itself. Then they find they can no longer accept as final and authoritative the answer given by their church. Still believing in God, they doubt His interpreters. Now there is little need of one's worrying over trifles such as the literal accuracy of some Biblical passage. But every one of the great religions has its theological aspect as well as its moral aspect, and we must assume that the founders knew what they were doing. We must assume that moral teachings by themselves do not constitute a great religion, that they do not have lasting power over the minds of men unless supported by a satisfying philosophy of the universe. Those who abandon theology will find their moral code not impregnable to argument.

Early theological support for the ethical teachings of Christ and other coherent and logical systems of earth, planets and heavens were overthrown by Copernicus. Machiavelli showed how inharmonious and self-seeking politicians were, and Montaigne described the real imperfect nature of man. Thus, the whole beautiful mediaeval system tottered, and skepticism became the fashion. Even graver problems to theological belief arose over the theory of Evolution and the work of Huxley and Darwin. And on that subject of Evolution I would like to point out that the emphasis placed upon "struggle for existence" and "survival of the fittest" seemed to justify a contempt for kindness. It was not fully recognized that the struggle was usually between one kind of animal and another, rather than between creatures of the same kind. Later scientists pointed out that the survival of a species usually depended upon the ability of its members to discover a basis for living together.

Present day biologists such as Huxley and Waddington and Gerard have gone further and claim to have found a basis for an absolute and permanent moral code. It involves the view of the animal kingdom as a tree which is invisible except for the twigs that are the known species. While no trunk is visible, the proponents of this conception feel they know where the trunk lies, and whither it is pointing. It is pointing in the direction of "good," with God's purpose, if you will. I look upon this conception as a magnificent one, not irreconcilable with religion, but unfortunately of little guidance in facing everyday practical problems.

In our own generation the uncertainty about moral standards has arisen, above all, from the development of what is called "depth" psychology, psychiatry, and psychoanalysis. Some of the ideas which spring from these studies, with the enormous prestige of the scientific methods behind them, are most disturbing to those whose grasp upon the religious basis for a moral code has become shaky.

Psychoanalysis is a young branch of psychology, still groping and much misunderstood and misinterpreted. Psychoanalysis must necessarily approach problems in a different manner than does religion. The psychiatrist must, to win the [Continued on page 22]

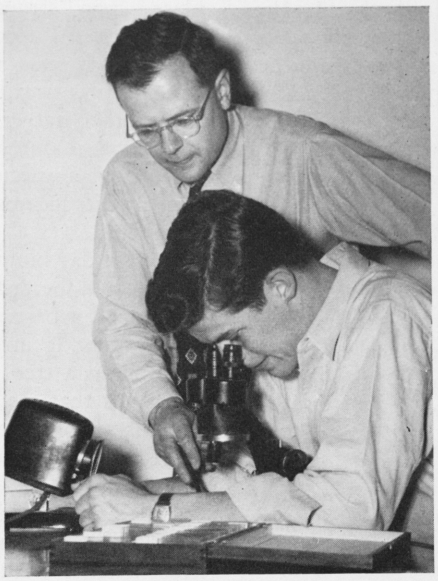
Biology at Middlebury College

By Dr. Harold B. Hitchcock

Each year at Commencement alumni wander into Warner Science Hall "to see how things are going now in the Bug Lab," and to breathe again the characteristic aroma of the laboratory—a combination of such odors as those from preserved dogfish and cats, xylol and alcohol, polliwogs and paraffin, inseparably blended. It is to such former students as these whose curiosity brings them back to Biology when they visit Middlebury that this article is especially addressed.



Dr. Hitchcock and Robert W. Parker, '53, in the biology laboratory.

For years comparative anatomy was taught in a large room at the west end of the building. Hanging on the office wall is a photograph of a comparative anatomy class of some twenty-five years ago, replete with such photogenic material as a human manikin and the skeleton of a Morgan horse colt. The class occupies seats arranged in an arc in the center of the room, while at the periphery are laboratory tables, benches, and display cabinets. Overhead are extraordinary lighting fixtures—double chandeliers of brass with electric light bulbs below and gas lights above.

Today's picture is rather different. Gone is the large combination lecture-laboratory room, replaced by two laboratories, one for comparative anatomy and embryology, the other for physiology and genetics. Gone are the old chandeliers, replaced by large fluorescent lamps. The sturdy tables with their commodious drawers and cupboards are still in service, and in the corner still stand the display cases with birds, fish and other vertebrate material, but the Morgan horse is now pastured in the museum room, and the human manikin has disappeared completely. Did it wander over to the Physical Education Department? With space at a premium its loss has not been particularly mourned. To complete the contrast, today's coeds come togged out in blue jeans rather than in modish skirts.

At the opposite end of the second floor the large room, originally a mirror image of the anatomy laboratory, has been equipped with laboratory tables. Thirty-six students can conveniently be accommodated in this room, which serves afternoons as the laboratory for the elementary courses, and mornings as a lecture room. In the olden days in order to have adequate illumination for microscopic work students were placed, so far as possible, at benches facing the windows. For the true naturalist this was the ideal arrangement, with a superb view across the wooded campus to the mountains. But now, with illumination from overhead or built-in microscope lamps, the view goes unnoticed. How about the material under the microscope—does it get undivided attention? Well, perhaps you'd better ask an undergraduate.

Beneath the hemicycle Dr. Webster has developed a well-equipped laboratory for botany. Here one finds the best of optical equipment and other apparatus essential for work of an exacting nature in bacteriology and advanced botany. Those who studied under Dr. Rex Webster will be sorry to learn that he has just resigned to accept a position at his alma mater, Butler University.

This summer the Department of Biology contemplates more changes in its plant. The present museum room on the second floor will become the Warner Science Hall library for the departments of Biology, Physics, Geology, Geography and Drafting, and the present library room will be subdivided into an office for the secretary-librarian, and a storeroom for the department. To compensate for the loss of space on the second floor the large room in the basement once utilized as the college paint shop and more recently as the carpentry shop has been allotted to the department. This space will be subdivided to provide an office for the botany instructor, an animal room, a dark room for photography, and a laboratory for advanced botany. Transfer chambers for bacteriological work will be installed in the present botany office.

Dr. Hitchcock was graduated from Williams College in 1926 and taught at Harvard University while studying for his advanced degrees. He was awarded his Master of Arts degree in 1932 and his doctorate in 1941. He is a recognized authority on natural history and the homing instincts of bats and pigeons.

In discussing the physical plant mention should be made of the forest lot given to the college for the use of the department years ago by Col. Battell. To this spot, at the base of the mountains, a few miles east of the college, botany classes are taken regularly on field trips. Porter Pond, behind the football stands, and surrounding fields nearer at hand also serve as outdoor laboratories.

Ten courses, each of a semester's duration, are offered, eight of them every year, the other two in alternate years. The elementary courses—Biology 11.1 and 11.2, for botany and zoology respectively, attract the largest number of students. This year over 150 students have had these courses, for the most part to meet the college requirement of a year of a laboratory science. In these courses the student learns of the living world about him both through lectures and text assignments, as well as from personal investigation of materials in the laboratory. In the laboratory work the emphasis is on independent observation and skill of dissection and portrayal. In many institutions the practice of having students make drawings has been almost completely abandoned. Though having ready-made drawings appeals greatly to most students, and permits the instructor to cover more ground, we have felt that there is much value in the making of drawings. Each student has his own specimen, whether it be seedling or pig embryo, and from it he is expected to discover the important structures and draw them clearly (though not necessarily artistically). At the elementary level students are introduced to important [Continued on page 22]

The President Fellows of Middlebury College $16055.55
sixteen thousand fifty five 55/100 Dollars
Nineteen hundred sixteen Alumni-Alumnae Contributors

President Samuel S. Stratton is shown (above) at the Reunion Barbecue on June 10 holding a large symbolic check for $16,055.55, the amount donated to the 1949–50 Alumni Fund. The presentation of the check to Dr. Stratton was made by William H. Edmunds, '17, Chairman of the Fund, before an audience of nearly 1700 Alumni, Alumnae, friends, members of the graduating class and parents.

The Alumni Fund Exceeds Goal

By Edgar J. Wiley, '13, Director of Alumni Relations

The closing of the 1949–50 Alumni Annual Giving Program on June 15 showed a total of $16,185.05 contributed by almost two thousand givers (1935). This amount which is more than the interest on half a million dollars of endowment will be used for scholarships during the 1950–51 academic year.

The Alumni and Alumnae Councils at their Homecoming meeting in the fall had set a goal of $15,000 for this year's Fund. The fact that practically 30% of the total number of Alumni and Alumnae contributed to the Fund in its first year augurs well for the development of annual giving at Middlebury as the idea of making yearly contributions to Alma Mater becomes more widespread. Approximately 50% of all living graduates and former students contributed to the Middlebury Memorial Fund used for building the Memorial Field House. (A high average according to statistics of the American Alumni Council.) Thus it would seem that when Alumni and Alumnae become familiar with the great possibilities of the new type of giving at least as great a percent of former Middlebury students will be listed as regular yearly supporters of the annual giving program.

The enthusiasm and interest of Class Fund Chairmen in stepping up the records of percentage of participation among their class members has been one of the striking features of the year's activity. Top honors went to the men of 1902 and 1906 who were tied for first place with 83.33%. The women of 1901 and 1903 ranked second with 80.00% of their members contributing. The record by classes is shown in a table on another page.

The feeling that any gift, even if not more than one dollar, would be sincerely welcomed seemed to appeal strongly to many whose loyalty and eagerness to share in the project exceeded their financial ability. On the other hand, the number that contributed well above the average of $8.36 accounted largely for the total subscribed.

At the Commencement meeting of the Executive and Advisory Committees of the Alumni Fund, recommendations were made to the Alumni Council and Alumnae Association which were endorsed at their meetings on June 10th as follows: That the objective of the 1950–51 campaign be scholarships, the same as this year; that the [Continued on page 22]

Twenty Years of Middlebury Debating

By Perley C. Perkins, Assistant Professor of English and Coach of Debating

Members of the Middlebury team which experienced a successful debating season during the past college year include, left to right; Donald Sherburne, '51; Debora Nye, '50; Coach Perley C. Perkins; Shoana Edgar, '51; and James Straney, '51. The team is posed before an automobile presented as a gift to the debaters by Edwin W. Lawrence, Rutland, Vt., attorney.

Middlebury College has in the past twenty years met on the forensic platform the leading colleges and universities of the Eastern seaboard, a few from farther West, plus teams from the British Isles, New Zealand, Canada, Hawaii, and Puerto Rico. Such domestic teams as Dartmouth, Harvard, Columbia, New York University, Boston University, Williams, Colgate, Syracuse, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Union, Brooklyn College, Tufts, and the College of the City of New York have been continuously on the Middlebury schedule; others such as Yale, Princeton, Pittsburg, Amherst, Boston College, Manhattan, William and Mary, Florida, Lafayette, Rutgers, Upsala, Muhlenberg, Hobart, New Hampshire, Davidson, Johns Hopkins, Brown, Clark, and the Maine colleges have been met periodically.

In two decades Middlebury's share of debating successes compares favorably with other competitive intercollegiate activities. The men's teams have debated three hundred and five times, of which one hundred and seventy-three have been decision debates with Middlebury winning one hundred and five debates and losing sixty-eight, for a percentage of .647. The women's teams have debated two hundred and forty-seven times, ninety-six of these being decision debates. Fifty-nine debates were won, thirty-seven lost by the distaff teams for a successful percentage of .627. From December 17, 1936, until December 10, 1941, the women's teams went five years without a defeat. The architects of this record being Jane Kingsley Parker and Frances M. Russell of the Class of '38, Gertrude Bittle Murray, Margaret Doubleday Tandy, and the former Frances E. Kellogg of the Class of '39, Carol Hubbard Newcomb, Audrey Wouters Meader, Elizabeth Stratton Hoagland, and Ruth Hardy Scheidecker of the Class of '41, Alice Austin Suydam of the Class of '42, and Elisabeth von Thurn of the Class of '43. Of these women, Mrs. Suydam, Mrs. Scheidecker, Miss Kellogg, Mrs. Tandy, Mrs. Murray, and Miss Russell, as well as Josephine Kirk Komow of the Class of '44 and Nancy Rathgeb Smith of the Class of '47, were never in a losing debate during their college careers.

The men experienced an undefeated season during the 1932–33 academic year, when Thomas J. Duffield and Edward Yerow, both of the Class of '33, took nine decision debates. They were aided by Herbert F. Irish, Archibald C. Tilford, Charles A. Deedman and Jack Steele, all of the Class of '36, freshmen beginners. Mr. Duffield and Mr. Yerow, with Arthur R. Kline of the Class of '32, were the mainstays of a three year record of twenty-four wins and six losses. In the year 1939–40 the Midd-men, led by the former Edward J. Drew, J. Halford Gordon and Glenn H. Leggett of the Class of '40, and Kyle Brown of the Class of '42, won ten straight unanimous decision debates while dropping two split decisions for a 12–2 record.

Listed in Middlebury debating history are eight men who in decision debates never lost a contest. They are Robert J. Matteson, '38; Lloyd Butterfield,

The author received both his A.B. and M.A. degrees from the University of New Hampshire before joining the English faculty of the College in 1923. He has been coach of the debating team since 1938.

'40; Howard R. Friedman, '43; Robert E. Reuman, '44; Larzer P. Ziff, '47; Jack M. Hale and George C. Newcomb, '48; and Constantine M. Broutsas, '49.

Other great Middlebury debaters in the past years include John F. Darrow, '37; Eleanore Cobb Lee, '36; John E. Unterecker, '44; Donald H. Hackel, '45; Margaret D. Armstrong, '47; Phillip G. Hull, '49; and Debora E. Nye, '50. Ably supporting them have been, in addition to those mentioned previously, Ellen Kellogg Norton, '31; Eva Tuttle Walsh, '32; Betty Knox Hunt, '37; Barbara Wishart Erickson, '36; Ralph Pickard, '37; W. Phillips Palmer, '39; Leroy R. Hovey, '41; Charles Blaha of the V-12 unit; Helen West Burbank, '41; Carol Bloom Chalmers, '37; Barbara Higham Trudeau, '43; Carol Becker Hutchinson, '46; and Gloria Antolini Keyser, '46.

The number of men and women who debate compares favorably with the number of participants in sport teams in intercollegiate competition. A debating team consists of two or three debaters, while a baseball team has nine, a basketball team five, and a football team eleven. In the past twenty years seventy-nine different men and eighty-four different women have debated for Middlebury. Since there has been no one-year rule in debating, the same men or women could debate for four years, were they good enough. This is roughly four additions, or twice the number on most teams, each year. The number of men actually debating each year has ranged between four and ten, and the number of women between four and thirteen. These numbers increased generally from 1930 to 1943, when the war cut down the turnout for debate. There was some recovery after 1946, but the number of post-war male debaters has been well below the average over the years.

There is a certain irony in the fact that the decline in masculine participation—shall we say interest? —is in inverse ratio to the material rewards available for effort. There have been, during these twenty years, two sets of prizes to be competed for, plus a third set awarded to the three best debaters in the annual University of Vermont and Middlebury College debate. The Wetherell Prizes offer a first and second to the two best men debaters, usually $25 and $20. These prizes have remained virtually unchanged in amount, but the Edwin Winship Lawrence Prizes, derived from a fund set up in 1925 by Edwin W. Lawrence, Rutland, Vt., attorney, and offering first, second and third prize awards to the three best debaters, regardless of sex, have been vastly increased during the past three years through extremely generous additions to the capital funds by Mr. Lawrence. For many years these prizes amounted to approximately $25, $15, and $10, but this year the first prize, awarded to Debora Nye, '50, was $250; the second prize, awarded to Shoana J. Edgar, '51, was $150; while the third Prize, split between Donald W. Sherburne and James C. Straney, '51, was $100. The awards in the Vermont-Middlebury debate, from a fund also set up by Mr. Lawrence, were this year $300 for first prize, $180 for second, and $120 for third. Miss Edgar of the Middlebury team took the first prize, thus making her winnings from debate for the year $450. Altogether our debaters won, for the year, in debate prizes, the sum of $840, which ought to be an incentive to participation in an activity whose other values have been amply demonstrated in many ways.

The generosity of Mr. Lawrence has aided Middlebury debating in two other ways this year. He has established a fund to be used for debating as the college may determine, and he has made the debating team the gift of a car for its trips. Already during the spring season this has been of immense help, and twenty-two hundred miles have been travelled with it. Not only can Middlebury take more debaters on each trip, than it could by train or bus, but it can make trips to places relatively inaccessible by those other modes of transportation. In pre-war days the writer used to take his personal car on many trips, but that being impossible as the vehicle aged, and the post-war costs being appreciably higher, the schedule had to be reduced to fit the budget. With the gift of the car, provision for continuous replacement of which has been made as a condition of the gift, the old schedules can be resumed and the budget generally stretched to happier all-around results.

Most Middlebury debaters have had little or no debating experience before coming to College. Generally our best debaters learned all they knew about the game after their arrival at the College. Relatively little debating seems to have been done by the schools from which our debaters came in recent years; Poughkeepsie, N. Y., sending us John Darrow and Charles Pressman, is the chief exception. To the writer, nothing about the teaching field holds quite the same satisfaction that comes from being a party to the development of a young man or woman from a raw neophyte, quite unable to present anything unified and compelling to an audience, and without [Continued on page 23]

A Yankee Looks at "Down Under"

By Hilda Woodruff Gollnick, '22

The chief difficulty in composing an article on Australia is to choose something from the wealth of material, so I have decided to tell you about a few general, but little known phases of Australian life.

Mrs. Hilda Woodruff Gollnick, '22

Australia, the size of the United States, has a population of approximately eight millions inhabiting a comparatively narrow coastal strip around the central sparsely populated Inland of about two million square miles. The great problem here is inadequate population and at present there is a drive for immigrants. Unfortunately, Australians, generally, do not welcome aliens and do little to assimilate them into the Australian way of life. The White Australia policy halts the recruiting of labour from her more populous neighbours and, in spite of her much publicised desire to take a leading part in Pacific affairs, makes her position confusing and suspect.

Because of this sparsely peopled interior, Australians are intensely aware of and sympathetic to the intrepid men and women who make their livings within its borders. Because of the dream and drive of Rev. John Flynn, an Inland Mission padre, backed by the Australian Board of Missions the Inland is ringed by excellent hospitals from which the Flying Doctors go out to their patients and to which serious cases are flown. The problem of getting word from patient to Base was solved by inventing a "pedal wireless" set by which calls are sent in Morse code. Although the Flying Doctors are now government controlled, the vision, experiment, and organization were Flynn's . . . a great achievement which has won him the affectionate title of "Flynn of the Inland."

A purely Queensland contribution is the Bush Book Club through which a group of volunteers send out over twenty thousand books and magazines a year to families of the "Outback."

Commissioner of Queensland Police Smith, controls six hundred and sixty-eight thousand square miles of territory. Some of his "back of beyond" police carry sixteen appointments for they are the only representatives of distant government departments. They track criminals, escaped convicts, and lost miners into the interior with only a black tracker for company on a trek that may take them many weeks. Even more thrilling is the work of the Northern Territory police whose patrols take many months to complete.

Australia's record of strikes is appalling, particularly as she has first rate legal machinery to settle all disputes by arbitration. Since the war it has become very evident that Communist-controlled key unions are carrying out a well-organized plan to disrupt her major industries and are succeeding all too well.

At present there is something of a cultural awakening here. For many years each capital city has had a symphony orchestra founded by the Australian Broadcasting Commission and supported by the Commission, the State Government, and the municipal council. This year each is extending its usefullness by touring country centers. Ormandy, Beecham, Sargent, and Kubelik have served as guest conductors and this year we anticipate an even more brilliant season. Art in Australia suffers from a certain rigidity in its teaching which results in lack of assurance and stability among the younger group. One of the most promising is self-taught aboriginal Namatajira whose work depicting the country and tribal customs of his race is virile in concept and glorious in color. Musical composition is of good standard, but little is published. By comparison, poetry and prose writing are mediocre. Australians are still copying the Victorians. I was once asked to lecture on some phase of American [Continued on page 23] during the academic year 1950–51. The Columbia plan is made possible by a grant to that university from the Carnegie Corporation. Professor Brown was nominated by President Stratton and selected from a large field of nominees representing many colleges. A member of the Middlebury English department since 1931, Professor Brown will study and participate in Columbia's courses in general education.

"OUR QUEST FOR A MORAL CODE"

confidence of his patient, display no surprise, no disgust, no blame. Psychoanalysis early became distinguished by the freedom with which it spoke of the most intimate things; thus it was accused by many of being godless and disgusting. Yet I do not think modern psychology is as contrary to religious teaching as is commonly supposed. You are not convinced; you still think that the psychiatrist preaches the dangers of "repression," and you do not realize that he means repression from the conscious into the unconscious, not repression from publicity to privacy.

Anthropology, another new science, tells of the strange habits of primitive and earlier societies who accepted as right, practices that we violently condemn as wrong. Confronted by such instances, we cry, how can right and wrong have one meaning at one time and place, another at another? Are they, then, not absolutes, but conditions of our era? The anthropologist answers that every society, however primitive, has some sense of right and wrong, and that sense is in some way fitted to serve the needs of the particular society.

Our traditional moral code, as we derive it from our churches, is not in harmony with the actual structure and pattern of our society as we live in it. When we look around us, we see a society dominated by the idea of the prestige that wealth confers, panting after material possessions, ill-adjusted to its present age-distribution. It is a society in which a saint is an outcast. Unlike the primitive peoples, we do have visions of a better code. But unlike them again, we have a society in which our own nominal code is unworkable.

I feel that the churches have lost millions of supporters through an umbrella-diplomacy of compromise. Compromise, the churches have told the man who in hard times accepts unethical employment to support his family. Be a good Christian in private life and sell goods of a questionable nature if necessary, is the appeasement policy dictated by the churches.

To accept materialistic arguments as overriding moral arguments is to haul down the flag at once. "Heaven lies about us in our infancy," says the poet. But as we grow older we become very well able to lie about ourselves and to ourselves. We are dull indeed if we cannot find specious reasons for doing what we wish to do, but know to be wrong. The anthropologist might tell us to throw away our old moral code in favor of one which will be in harmony with our society as that of the Plain Indians is harmonious with the needs of their society. This seems plausible. Yet, I wonder. The society of the Plain Indians was a primitive one, with simple needs and a simple code. Yet it survived and must have been in some kind of harmony with the world in which it existed. Whatever its professed beliefs, our society is materialistic, competitive and rapacious. Are these qualities adjusted to the world in which our society exists? Do they promise its survival? Or do they not rather threaten the whole of civilization with destruction? Is it not much use adjusting our professed moral code to the actual practice of our society, if that practice is to blow us off the face of the earth in a few short years?

therioes of evolution, the purpose being to enable them to get a perspective of man's place in the wor'd of nature.

Each year between twenty and thirty students continue with advanced courses in biology. Many of them elect a joint major in chemistry and biology, a program especially recommended for those preparing for medical school. By means of the joint major the science requirements for professional school are met without specialization to an extent that defeats the purpose of a liberal arts education.

The following advanced courses are taught each year: comparative anatomy, embryology, genetics, human physiology, general physiology and advanced botany. In alternate years histology and bacteriology are offered. Next year for the first time the course in human physiology will include a laboratory period of three hours a week. The content of this course has been selected to meet the needs of students whose major interest is not in biology, but more likely in physical education, home economics, or psychology. The general physiology course is a senior course, designed especially for majors in h department, and perhaps the most difficult in the department, drawing together as it does facts learned in the various biology courses as well as those in chemistry and physics. Special courses are available to honors students. Their scope is limited only by the interest of the students involved, who determine in consultation with the instructor what the field shall be.

setting of the goal in money to be raised and in per cent of participation be postponed until the Homecoming meeting in the fall; and that the opening and closing dates of the 1950–51 Fund be December 1, 1950, and June 15, 1951.

It was also voted that the incoming Presidents of the Alumni and Alumnae Associations, Donald D. Fredrickson, '25, and Mrs. Gunhild Elfstrom Carlson, '27, should be added to the Executive Committee, and that the Executive Committee be authorized to fill any vacancies in the list of Class Fund Chairmen or other vacancies that may occur during the year.

Literature; I suggested dealing with modern American poets, but was told in all sincerity by an Australian scholar that I lacked material for such a topic since we had produced no one worthwhile since Whitman and Poe. At that we are two up on the Australians who have produced none.

In contradiction to two American gentlemen from an American university who visited Brisbane recently and, attempting to further international accord by stating that education here was ahead of anything in America, created a good deal of mirth among professors who know something about our standards, I would say that in certain faculties notably the sciences, they equal us, but that in other fields they fall short. For the most part, the universities are overcrowded, under-staffed, and poorly-equipped. Education in primary and secondary schools follows the English pattern. There are the great public schools which are private and the State schools which are public. Emphasis is placed on English, Maths, and Science. "Goll" attends Church of England Grammar School for boys, one of the finest schools here. The maximum number of subjects taken is nine, the minimum is six. Discipline is based on the prefect system. Each boy must engage in some sport other than "house sports" and the Cadet Corps, which is found in each school under the tutelage of a regular Army officer and in which one afternoon a week is devoted to drill and the use of modern weapons. For boys and girls who prefer it the State provides a High School similar to ours at home. One of the unique contributions Australia has made to education is the Primary Correspondence School. Queensland's branch was founded in 1922 and now has one hundred teachers to cope with five thousand pupils within the State and as far away as Hong Kong, Singapore, Burma, and Fiji. A child between the ages of five and ten living two miles away from the nearest school or over ten living three miles away is eligible. His lessons are sent by "train, truck, ship, horse, van, camel, or plane." A week's work is sent at a time but progress is based on ability. When the work is completed it is returned to the school, marked by the teacher, and returned with the next assignment. One member of the family acts as supervisor, but the child is honor bound to do the work by himself. He takes a final examination when he has finished each grade. Upon completion of his Primary Course he may continue his Junior and Senior work under the State Teachers College . . . thus some students are in University who have never before sat in a classroom. There is no charge for anything except to pupils who live outside the mainland . . . they pay five pounds a year. This, to my mind, is one of the great things Australia has accomplished.

confidence, to a fluent, sure, forceful, informed and generally effective debater who can put across a case to any audience. There is something done, that is obvious, certain and lasting.

There are certain misconceptions about debating that keep some students from trying out for it, and perhaps keep others from showing an interest. One is that debating makes people argumentative and contentious. Nothing could be farther from the truth. A trained debater never argues without the facts and logic, and usually he knows both sides of the questions he argues. Some people think that debating takes too much time, but in reality it takes less time than any other intercollegiate sport or activity. There are no regular daily practice sessions as in sports; a debater works only when preparing for specific debates. And with this misconception goes a lack of understanding of the values, which have been proved again and again by Middlebury Debaters who have gone into law, business, teaching, journalism, government work, or the other professions.

What debating can do for a student is ably demonstrated by the greatest feat associated with Middlebury debating since 1930. In 1940, Hal Gordon and Glenn Leggett, seniors with four years of debating experience, debated "capital punishment" impromptu a subject they had never prepared, in a radio debate in New York City when the Columbia University manager got confused on the dates of his debates and announced the wrong one as the debate started. Gordon and Leggett debated so well that no one in the studio or the air audience suspected that the subject was entirely new to them.

Developments in these twenty years include a change from three to two man teams; a trial in the late thirties of various new forms of debate, such as the forum, round table, direct clash; increased use of the cross questioning method; and in the forties the influx in the East of Western speech men trained more in speech than in debate or the social sciences which provide the topics for debate, with a consequent loss of generally accepted concepts of debate and greater variety in theory and practice.

Student Turns Down Three Awards To Go To Middlebury

Barbara M. Slate of Geneva, N. Y. won three scholarships to colleges in New York state but turned them down to enter Middlebury this fall without a scholarship. Miss Slate took a test this spring for a $550 four-year scholarship at Syracuse University and won it. Next came notification from Cornell University that she had received a state scholarship of $200 a year in tuition. However, she could attend Cornell tuition-free because her father, George L. Slate, is an employee of the State Agricultural Experiment station in Geneva.

On the heels of the Cornell proposition came the news that she had won the state's university scholarship of $350 a year. Miss Slate's explanation for turning down all these offers is: "I just like Middlebury."

Regional Dinner Notes

By E. J. WILEY, '13, Director of Alumni Relations

A new dinner group was organized this season in the Syracuse area to make a total of seventeen regional meetings held during the winter and spring of 1950. The new sound film of Middlebury in color was a special feature of the dinner programs to supplement talks by President Stratton and other members of the faculty and staff on recent developments at the College. Approximately 1200 graduates and friends of the College gathered in the various centers to renew old friendships and be brought up to date on Middlebury news.
